

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections.

Indiana's telephone privacy law has improved my home life by providing uninterrupted family time and the stress of having to deal with high pressure telemarketers.

I used to receive 10-12 calls per day, now I only receive one or two a week.
Changing our state law would be taking away our right to a quality home environment and freedom from harassing telemarketers.

Thank you for any consideration in advance,
Rhonda Jersild